The birthday came, the day was fair,
Grandma's young friends assembled were.
Tea-time arrived, the cake proved nice,
So each one present had a slice:
And after tea they danced away,
Till night brought on the close of day.

Now, Tray, the Dog so wise and sly,
To answer questions he will try;
Your age he'll guess, and let you know
If you will wed your present beau.
Besides, there was a learned pig,
Who dressed like lawyer in a wig.

From the back window could be seen,
Our visitors pass the meadow green;
And as they each went out of sight,
A signal bade them all good night.
Then all was silent, and the house
So quiet you'd have heard a mouse.
